MOTHER.

When she undid her hair at night,
About the time for lying down,
She came and kneelt. I was so small
There in my bed, her eyes did fall
All over me, light gold and brown.

I fell asleep amid her prayers,
Her fair young face (as oft it seems),
Her girlish voice, and kisses sweet,
The patter of her busy feet,
Passed with me into charming dreams.

And when I woke at merry morn,
Through her hair gold, I saw the sun
Flame strong, shine glad and glory
The great good world. Oh! new to me I felt her words—"My darling one!"

Ah! checked years since then have crept Past her and me; and we have known
Some sorrow and much tempered joy.
Far into manhood stands her boy,
And her gold hair snow-white is blown.

The world has changed by slow degrees,
And as the days recede, alas!
So much of trouble have the new,
Those rare, far joys grow dim, seen through Sad times, as through a darkened glass.

But just this morning when I woke How lovingly my lips were kissed!
How chase and clear the sunlight shone
On mother's hair like golden corn, Altogether thin clouds of silver mist!

FOR THE LADIES.

Breakfast caps retain the Martha Washington and Charlotte Corday shapes.

The black silk saques and mantles worn before cashmere wraps came in fashion will, it is said, be revived for Spring.

The newest lace neck-ties are scars of Mechlin lace made with a band of insertion down the middle, with lace on each side, and wide pleated lace on each end.

Mechlin lace is mostly used for the little jabots worn down the front of dresses. These are woven across in shells, or else have a row of insertion down the middle. Price, $1 50.

The novelty for scarf sashes and overskirts for evening dresses is white net covered so closely with silver spangles that the network is concealed and a surface of silver is presented. It is also used for transparent sleeves of silk dresses.

New fienus of muslin and lace are laid in crests all over, edged with lace and finished with drooping ends of ribbon in front. They are high and slender around the neck and shoulders, and have short square ends prettily trimmed and lapped in front.

The first Spring suits to be done will be those made of the de beige in plain or colors of brown and gray sandy. In this soft wool fabric is imposed plain mat threads loosely woven, in serge twills, in rough surfaces like camel's hair, and later importations will show plaid and striped de beige.

"Dancing classes" are becoming quite a prominent feature of the season. They are very pleasant and enjoyable sort of affairs, conducted on an economical basis. One or two married ladies attend to "matronize," and sit quietly in the corner while young men clasp young women about the waist and go whirling around the room to the music of the band.

Ball and party dresses this season are remarkably elegant. There is an air of grace and style about them hitherto unequalled, and the most ordinary and commonplace-looking lady is made to look distinguished, and even society in the well-dressed of the people. This fact, we believe, is generally admitted, and none are so gratified to make the assertion as the ordinary and commonplace-looking ladies themselves.

The latest novelty introduced into society during the gay season has been furnish where the lady guests were not allowed to be over twenty-one years of age. This fact being publicly stated, the exact ages of those who were invited were, of course, nicely criticized. The daughter of a clergyman, who was present, observing a guest who was belated to be older than herself, happened to remember that her father baptized the guest, and quickly referred to the baptismal register, which at once made the lady twenty-five. These "majority parties" are the wisest things, and cannot often be judiciously attempted.

Anecdotes of George III.

Charles Knight, the originator of the Penny Magazine, was the son of a bookseller in Windsor, near the Royal palace, to whose shop the King frequently came to look over the new publications. One summer morning, before the shop was fully opened, the voice of the King was heard under the windows, calling "Knight! Knight!
Knight!" His father came down as soon as possible, and found the King deeply absorbed in reading a work which had come down in a parcel from London the evening before.

When his father and son were considering the book, and the King discovered to discover that the King had taken up Thomas Paine's Rights of Man, in which the author defended the institution of monarchy. The King continued to read for half an hour, at the expiration of which he laid down the book and left the shop without a word, but also without offense, for he continued to be as friendly and frequent a visitor as before.

Mr. Knight also reports that the King was as much amused as any one at the caricatures of the day, in which he was broadly burlesqued, and that he was quite capable of being amused at Peter Pindar's poems of the "Apple-Dumplings and Farmer George." He was indeed, in private life, as good-natured and amiable a gentleman as ever misgoverned a Kingdom or spoiled a family. Mr.
Knight tells an amusing story in point. One evening, after having joined the family in the drawing-room, where he had been writing, and found the wax candles still burning. It was a curious rule of the palace, as of great houses generally in that day, that a wax candle should never be lighted a second time, and the unaccounted portions were usually the perquisites of some servant or officer of the household. These particular wax candles blazing away in the King's library were the perquisites of the King's page, named Clarke, with whom the King met on his return to the drawing-room. "Clarke, Clarke," said the King in his rapid manner,
"you should mind your perquisites.
I blew out the candles." It cost the English people at that time 400,000 a year to provide Windsor Castle with wax candles. The government of the Royal household was as wasteful and corrupt as the city of New York used to be.

Mr. Curran was once engaged in a legal argument. Behind him stood his colleague, a gentleman whose person was remarkably tall and slender, and who had originally intended to take orders. The Judge observed that the case under discussion involved a point of ecclesiastical law. "Then," said Curran, "I can refer your Lordship to a high authority behind me, who was once intended for the church, though, in my opinion, he was fitter for the steeple."

Two colored men took refuge under a tree in a violent thunder shower.
"Julius can you pray?" said one. "No Sam," was the reply; "heebber prayed in my life." "Well, can't you sing a hymn?" "No, Sam; don't know no hymn." "Well, see heeb, boyey, summa 'ligious' 's got to be done heeb mighty sudden. Spose you pass round the contribution box."

THE HERALD PAMPHLET.

[NEW EDITION.]

LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

Its Agricultural, Manufacturing and Mineral Resources—Its Geographical and Commercial Positions—Its Harbors, Railroads and Railroad System—Statistics Relating to Climate, Soil, Products, Etc.

PRICE, . . . . . 15 Cents.

This edition contains thirty-two pages of double column matter, every article of which is descriptive of some thing or some part of Los Angeles valley. The following are the titles to the leading articles: "Los Angeles County and Los Angeles Valley," "The Southern Pacific Railroad," "The Los Angeles and Pacific Railway," "Our Railroad Wants," "Steamers, Rail and Stage," "The Assessor's Figures," "Spadina and the Surrounding Country," "The El Monte District," "The Nietos," "Wilmington," "Anaheim," "San Fernando," "Cintela Colony," "Compton," "The Tustin Settlement," "Santa Ana," "Cienega and La Ballona," "Westminster Colony," "Semi-Tropical and Other Fruits," "Fruit Drying Works," "What Grains Flourish Here," "The San Gabriel Valley," "Potatoes in Los Angeles Valley," "San Bernardino County," "Mines in Los Angeles County," "Mines in San Bernardino and Inyo Counties," "Marble Discoveries," "Petroleum Oil," "Climate," "Fuel, Water, Gas," "Banks and Commerce," "Public Library," "Schools in Los Angeles County," "Churches," "Sea Bathing." Besides these there are many other articles of equal interest. This pamphlet contains more reliable information concerning semi-tropical California than can be found in any other publication. It will be sold at fifteen cents per copy—the cost of publication.

Los Angeles Herald.

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

WEDNESDAY,.....MARCH 3, 1875.

That Mare's Nest.

That wonderful pass which the engineers of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company discovered in the Cajon mountains has passed in its checks and passed out of sight. It proved to be a sort of Jack o' lantern—a mirage—that existed "in my mind's eye, HORATIO." The latest information from the front is to the effect that the Southern Pacific people have abandoned their pass and vacated the premises and that Mr. CRAWFORD, Chief Engineer of the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad, has located his lines through the pass proper and has a large force of graders manufacturing road bed as fast as muscle, shovels, picks and powder will do the work.

Water Power.

It is a subject for wonder that the great water power facilities of Los Angeles and vicinity have not attracted more general attention from the many manufacturers and machinists who have from time to time visited our city. Around the foot of the chain of hills which gird our city on the West and Southwest are the natural sites for a dozen manufacturing establishments, each of which could obtain an abundant water power at mere nominal cost. The city owns the water of the Los Angeles river and will always make the most liberal arrangements with those who desire water power for manufacturing purposes. The water is used for irrigating purposes on the level valley and that portion of it which is brought over the hills from the river may do the work of a thousand horse power engine before it reaches the field of operation as an irrigator. Los Angeles valley needs now a beet sugar factory, a paper mill and half a dozen other manufacturing establishments, among them an agricultural implement manufactory. These are industries that must come and the men of business and capital who come first will secure the best localities on the most liberal terms and build up a large trade without contending with opposition.

Cultivation of Small Fruit.

The HERALD is in daily receipt of letters from people in the East, enquiring what a person or family with a small capital can do in Los Angeles valley in the way of fruit raising. It depends a good deal on what is considered a small capital, and on the kind of fruit one proposes to grow. To do anything the capital should be sufficiently large to secure a few acres of land on which to make the home. This may be done with a sum ranging from $1,500 to $5,000. Now, if it is proposed to grow oranges, lemons and limes, some provision must be made for living from the time the trees are set out until they begin to bear—a period of not less than five years. Suppose the trees are five years old when set out, they will yield no return until they are ten or eleven years old. This is not an encouraging prospect for a family that has expended its small capital in land and trees. A return is received from peach, apple, and pear trees something sooner than in the middle or Eastern States. But a profit may be realized from land planted in semi-tropical fruit trees, long before the trees themselves bear fruit. It is all the better for the trees if the land is cultivated, and if the space is occupied with vines and small fruit shrubbery, a handsome profit is the result. The blackberry, currant, raspberry and strawberry may all be grown on land planted with semi-tropical fruit trees. Except the strawberry, but little attention has been paid to the cultivation of small fruit in this valley. These products are receiving more care now than formerly, and we have no doubt they will come to be the means of support for families with small capital during the intermission between the planting and the yielding of their orange groves.

Will None of It.

The persistent efforts of politicians to draw the Grange into politics and thus convert the organization into an engine for hoisting themselves into office have, we are happy to say, thus far signally failed. And so long as the Grange is true to its principles, so long as it is controlled by farmers—it will not sink into the filthy pool of politics and become the tool of scheming and dishonest politicians. Almost every subordinate Grange, especially those in the vicinity of large towns and cities are beset with men who are not farmers in the true sense of the term, and who have no sympathy with the farmers' interest or regard for the farmers' welfare. They want to become grangers not because they desire to aid in the development and advancement of our agricultural resources, but in the hope that they may wield the Grange power for their individual interests—that they may call themselves the "Grange candidate" for the office they have in view. We doubt if many of these curb-stone farmers will succeed in worming themselves into the Grange, and we have too much faith in the good sense of the farmers to believe that these new converts to the profession of CINCINNATUS will ever reach the goal of their ambition by the vote of the Grange. The last announcement that the Grange will not go into politics comes from the Granger's Convention held in San Francisco recently, and reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Patrons of Husbandry of California, while they deeply sympathize with their brethren of other industrial pursuits in their efforts to liberate themselves from the thralldom in which they are held by monopolies, disavow any intention of forming political alliances, and in accordance with the avowed principles of the Order, they reaffirm their absolute opposition to joining with any political organization as a body, each patriot being entirely free to exercise the elective franchise according to the dictates of his own judgment.

ROMANCE OUTDOONE.

Lizzie Peck's Nervelous Story—Love by Photograph—Substitution—Divorce Proceedings, Lost Property and Forgery.

[S. F. Call, February 28th.]

A short time since a young colored woman known as Lizzie Peck was arrested on a charge of forgery, the alleged offence consisting in procuring goods upon orders falsely signed with the name of Mary Pleasant, whom the accused claims as her mother. Lizzie now tells

A REMARKABLY STRANGE STORY.

She alleges that she was attending a first-class private school in Boston, where she and her sister were left by their parents on their departure for California. About a year afterward her mother wrote her, informing her that a wealthy colored man in San Francisco had been enamored of her from seeing her picture, and that the mother had promised him the hand of the girl. With this came a letter from the lover himself, making an offer of marriage. Another letter shortly came to hand, enclosing his picture, and showing him to be a man advanced in years. At the same time she received from her mother a sum of money sufficient for her passage, with order to repair to San Francisco and be married.

SUBSTITUTION.

Having conceived an affection for a young man about her own age, the girl conceived the idea of sending her sister, who somewhat resembled her, to fulfil the matrimonial contract, and accordingly a ticket was purchased and the sister departed. The next news she received was an epistle from the mother, family wrath, ordering her to depart instantly for San Francisco, or be prepared to support herself in future, as not another dollar should she receive from home.

A SEPARATION.

She came to this city, and against her will was married to her adorer. In a few months they separated, and the wife began an action for divorce, asking for a share of the property.

About this time the sister died, and the heroine of the story was herself dangerously ill for a long time. On recovery she bethought herself of her divorce business, and waited on her lawyer to learn the result. To her astonishment she found that the mother had represented to the attorney that she was the one who had died, and that the case had been stricken from the docket. She and her husband were on friendly terms, though she refused to live with him, and he often supplied her with money. Finally he died, assuring his wife that she should be provided for.

ALLEGATION AGAINST THE MOTHER.

She alleges that during his last illness her mother prevented her having access to him, and persuaded him that as the daughter was incapable of transacting business intelligently, the best way to insure her comfort was to leave her to the property to her (the mother) to be used for the daughter's benefit. Accordingly, by deed of gift, the dying man conveyed to Mrs. Pleasant property worth over $10,000. The girl alleges that she never received any benefit from the $120 per month of rents collected from this property, and that the present prosecution is a plan to get rid of her importunities. She alleges that the difference between her mother and herself arose from the mother's explanation on the trial in a way to create a sensation in certain quarters.

Heaven in California.

The Crawfordsville, Indiana, Star, of January 26th, speaks as follows of California and of a Californian who was passing through that town on his way to his home in Indiana:

One of the curiosities at the Railroad Junction the other day was a man direct from San Diego, California. It was one of our coldest mornings, and as the shivering traveler told the gaping crowd how he had left the land of gold, but a week since, with the flowers all in bloom, the green grass spread out beneath his feet, the earth and air teeming with animal and vegetable life, the streets full of gaily-dressed people in their Summer attire, and the whole beneath a Summer sky and a Summer sun, the mother crowd of interested hearers presented a strange appearance of mingled awe and wonder. Loafers who never had any higher ambition than to sit on the warm side of a sunny building and whistle on the breeze, were all attentive, and wished they were in that blissful clime never disturbed by Winter's chilling blasts, and where drunks can repose under a harvest moon at any time or season of the year and never freeze. And as that poor shivering stranger, who had come to the order 'all aboard,' sprang upon the moving train, to those listeners he seemed an angel sent from some faraway paradise; and the name of the 'golden-gated city of Frisco' fell on their willing ears as the sound of rippling waters in the desert worn pilgrim. It is doubtful if it is possible to-day to convince one of those loafers that the Golden State is other than the abode of angels, or that the half-frozen traveler was not a messenger sent direct from those far-off land of Peri, bidding them to come.

Bishop Ames tells a story of a slave master in Missouri, in the olden times of negro vassalage, who said to his chattel: "Pompey, I hear you are a great preacher." "Yes, massa, de Lord do help me powerful sometimes." "Well, Pompey, don't you think the negroes steal little things on the plantation?" "I see mighty 'fraid they does, massa." "Then, Pompey, I want you to preach a sermon to the negroes against stealing." "You see, massa, dat would never do, 'cause 'twould trow such a col'sen over de meetin'!"

Congressional News.

WASHINGTON, March 1st.—The Senate to-day considered the Tax and Tariff bill, and laid it on the table by a vote of 30 to 29.

The House adopted Butler's amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, appropriating $5,000 for the prosecution of the claim of the United States to the New Idria (California) Mining Company's lands, by a vote of 100 to 56.

The following California items were agreed in the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill: To survey the Pacific Coast, $231,000; expenses of the Surveyor-General of California, $7,000; the Benicia arsenal, $35,000; expenses of the New Idria suit, $5,000; Navy Yard at Mare Island, $20,000; appraiser's stores at San Francisco, $100,000; Marine Hospital, San Francisco, $150,000. Pengra, of Oregon, failed to obtain a recommendation from the Interior Department for a bill granting indemnity scrip in lieu of lands claimed by the Military Wagon Road Company, but included in the Klamath Reservation.

The Louisville Library Lottery.

LOUISVILLE, February 27th.—The Library drawing began this morning. The managers having announced last night, that only 38 per cent. of the tickets having been sold prizes would be scaled in the same proportion. The capital prize of $95,000 was drawn by ticket 89,271; and the second prize, $38,000, was drawn by ticket 10,075. The amount of the capital prize has been reduced from $250,000 to $90,000. The $3,320 prizes have been drawn by the following tickets: 46,161, 47,271, 50,102, 53,425, 98,935. The $3,800 prizes have been drawn by the following numbers: 61,145, 53,813, 25,633, 44,450, 40,172. The $1,900 prizes have been drawn by Nos. 11,877, 18,422, 21,811, 55,235, 58,353, 57,116, 54,431, 51,014, 77,845, 97,550, 58,816, 92,232, 91,171. The $1,520 prizes have been drawn by Nos. 49,549, 42,182, 31,815, 20,242, 75,696, 76,143, 57,824, 43,254. The $1,140 prizes were drawn by Nos. 53,784, 63,129, 75,102, 92,152, 85,748, 89,969, 65,374, 9,770, 14,217, 16,109, 19,543, 22,145, 38,011, 40,079, 5,098.

Compromise a Failure.

NEW ORLEANS, March 1st.—The Committee of Seventy, at a meeting to-night adopted resolutions condemning and repudiating the Wheeler compromise, and requesting United States Senators friendly to the cause of Louisiana to oppose the passage in the House of the Joint Resolutions recognizing Kellogg's and declaring their intentions in behalf of the Conservative Democratic people of Louisiana never to recognize the Kellogg government, but to oppose it before Congress and the people of the United States.

Disatisfaction Among the Compromisers in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, February 27th.—There is much dissatisfaction among the compromisers with reference to the mode of adjustment. It is said that members not passed upon by the Returning Board will refuse to sign the agreement demanded by Wheeler.

Another Polygamist in Trouble.

SALT LAKE CITY, February 27th.—In the case of Reese, the polygamist, whose first wife sued for a divorce and alimony, it was ordered by Judge McKee to-day that the defendant pay attorney's fees, $1,500, and $2,000 alimony per year from the time of the filing of the complaint, pending final decision by the Court.

No Polygamists need Apply.

SALT LAKE CITY, March 1st.—The Grand Jury is being drawn to-day. Polygamists or those expressing contentious scruples about filing indictments against polygamists, are excluded.

Cruelty to Robbers.

MOKELEHNE HILL, March 1st.—The down stage to Lodi this morning was stopped by two masked men one mile below Comanche. They demanded the express box, broke it open and took out a large bag of stone-coal, supposing it to be bullion. The driver was ordered to go on. The passengers, who had about $500 on their persons, were not molested.

A Tannery Burned.

STOCKTON, March 1st.—A disastrous conflagration occurred here last night. The Pacific tannery, owned by Kallman, Wagner & Co., was burned. When first discovered, the flames were bursting through the roof. The building and all its contents, except the books, papers and money in the office were destroyed. The property estimated their loss, including the building, stock and machinery, at from $75,000 to $100,000. The insurance is small. This is the third time this property has been destroyed within a few years. Thirty-five or forty persons were thrown out of employment. The origin of the fire is not known, but many suppose it to be the work of an incendiary. The tannery was the largest manufacturing establishment in this city and its destruction is a public calamity.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2nd.—The inquiry into the loss of the steamer Japan has elicited much greater amount of evidence than that adduced at Hong Kong. Captain Waterman, Inspector of Hulls, conducted the investigation on behalf of the Government, assisted by Mr. Hawkhurst, Engineer-Superintendent of the company. It is impossible to say exactly what the report will be, as the examination has been conducted privately, but it is probable that different conclusions will be reached as to the cause of the disaster; that the fire did not originate in the coal-bunker, but in the hold, and had gained great headway when discovered.

In the Board of Supervisors last night, resolutions were adopted to re-investigate the account of E. P. Buckley, ex-Lieutenant Collector, the sessions to be public, the same being necessary in the judgement of the Board so as to show the conduct pursued and the amount of defalcations in the management of the department, and so that the ends of justice may be subserved and the amount out of which the city has been defrauded ascertained, and that the same may be recovered by due process of law.

An affray on Clinton street yesterday afternoon, resulting from family difficulties, in which J. Niphan stabbed Thomas Griggs in the thigh and abdomen, and it is feared fatally. Niphan was arrested on the charge of assault to murder.

When the Duke of Newcastle was in this country, a citizen of Cincinnati who had managed to get introduced to the Duke, thus introduced his wife at Pike's Opera House. The Duke, let me introduce you to my wife, Mrs. Judge—the daughter of Maj. Gen.—, of Kentucky, who was brutally murdered by British and Indians while gloriously fighting for his country at the battle of the River Raisen.

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

WEDNESDAY,.....MARCH 3, 1875.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Ventura sails for San Francisco to-day.

The Constitution sailed for Nanaimo yesterday.

The Board of Supervisors have adjourned.

Downey shipped yesterday 125 sacks of corn and 41 bales of hay.

C. Brode—a son—everything serene.

The Santa Barbara Index has been enlarged to a six-page sheet.

Go to the new Postoffice building for your mail this morning.

Five hundred boxes of oranges were shipped from the depot yesterday.

Social circles are all agog over the coming masquerade ball.

Mr. Will R. Bettis has been appointed deputy poll-tax collector.

San Bernardino is having bonanza balls and parties.

Judge Gray took in several new recruits for the chain-gang yesterday.

A slight shower commenced falling about 7:30 last evening.

The air grew quite chilly yesterday afternoon—a premonitor of rain.

Our old friend Will Tell, of seaside notoriety, is now happy in a larger bear saloon in San Bernardino.

There are only a few more chances left in the thousand dollar diamond ring at the Fashion Saloon.

Judge Widney expects to christen his new line the East Los Angeles and San Pedro Street Railroad.

A meeting of Los Angeles Lodge, No. 35, I. O. O. F., of special importance will be held to-night. A full attendance is expected.

A party of Councilmen and one reporter took a ride over the line of the newly projected street railroad yesterday.

Bear in mind that Williams will sell forty-six valuable town lots on Friday. They go at auction and are a rare chance.

The iron of the Main Street and Agricultural Park Railroad is expected to arrive next week, when active operations in track-laying will be commenced.

The proprietor of the Merced Theatre, Mr. Abbott, is making arrangements to put in a new gallery and make other important improvements in the building.

The iron for the Main street railroad left San Francisco on Monday. Governor Downey will go up on the next steamer to select the plan of cars to be used on the road.

The shipments from Anaheim by railroad during the month of February were as follows: 3,764 sacks barley, 173 sacks corn, 715 sacks rye, 200 sacks potatoes, 22 pipes wine, 29 sacks wheat, 19 sacks beans, 39 boxes eggs.

There is a man in San Bernardino so mean that he refused to buy a three cent postage stamp for his wife the other day. It may be that she was writing to his mother-in-law, and in that case he was excusable.

J. C. Wallace entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of manslaughter, in the District Court yesterday. The trial was set for the 25th inst., and a venire issued for 50 jurors.

The Disciples of Christ formed themselves into a Church last Sunday with 29 members. The organization will hereafter be known as the Christian Church.

Miss Jennie Leys, by request, will relate some of her experiences in the transition from Orthodoxy to Spiritualism at Merced Theatre, this evening, at 7:30 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

It is now thought that the second sale of Centinela property, advertised for the 12th of April next, may not come off as the lands are being sold very rapidly at private sale, and may be entirely disposed of before that time.

The attention of our business men is directed to the fact that J. L. Ward makes collections on Panamint safely and promptly. Mr. Henry G. Houston, late of Los Angeles and well known and respected here, is his agent at that place.

Rumor hath it that a couple of Los Angeles lawyers had an interesting little set-to at Anaheim last Monday. They were both drunk; they went at it tooth and toe; they clinched and fell, and rolled over and over, but neither one was much hurt.

A spiritualist of this city who is far gone in the faith has a sleeping apartment about ten feet square raised on timber to the height of twenty feet from the ground. To this he repairs at night for repose, and the spirits finding great difficulty in climbing the posts, let him alone.

Mr. A. J. Davidson made his appearance in town yesterday for the first time since his late accident, by which he lost the thumb of his left hand. He carried his arm in a band-box and looked a little demoralized generally, but said that he was getting along finely.

A subscriber writing from Baldeye, Miss., says: "I have received three numbers of the WEEKLY HERALD, and am well pleased with the paper. I now want a copy of the HERALD pamphlet, and enclose stamps." Documents or papers relative to California are in such demand here that a man must keep his having one a secret if he wishes to be able to refer to it himself.

Mr. John Donahue of the Training Stables on Main street has associated with himself as partner Mr. Henry, better known as "Hank," a veteran trainer. The present company keep in connection with the training business, a general livery and boarding stable. They board trains and let horses on the most reasonable terms. Parties having promising colts would do well to put them under the care of these experienced hands in the business.

Board of Supervisors.

TUESDAY, March 24.

The Board met at 10 A. M. The District Attorney, in the application of Ignacio Del Valle for release from tax on mortgage, gave his opinion that the tax could not be collected. Sheriff ordered not to sell property.

The petition of J. C. Hickey and others, for a road from Newport to Santa Ana, granted. L. Seebold, Mr. Lockhart and G. Morgan appointed viewers.

Petition of S. D. Smith and two others, asking to have their names stricken from a petition to open a road through the lands of Chapman and Newmark, above the Mission. Petition granted.

Petition and remonstrance for road through Mr. Stout's land, at Los Nietos, near the college—four disinterested parties selected to view premises and determine whether road should be opened or not.

Petition of J. W. Clark and others for road from Westminster to Anaheim depot. Granted. L. Seebold, B. F. E. Kellogg and D. W. C. Cowan appointed as viewers.

Petition of F. A. McNeil asking to be refunded money paid for a double assessment of taxes. Granted.

A. Langenberger petitioned to be refunded taxes on mortgage released three years ago, but release not on record. Granted.

The petition of Wm. J. Rowland and others for a bridge across Vega Honda creek, was read, and the application ordered to be advertised, as required by law.

The bonds of the Commissioners, elected for the Cajon Water District, were approved, and those of J. E. Tipton, for Road Overseer of Azusa, were also approved.

The Clerk was authorized to advertise for bids for medicine and medical attendance for the County Hospital and County Jail; also for the county printing and advertising. Adjourned till the first Monday in April.

That Odious Word, "Uncertain."

The San Diego Union is peculiarly sensitive now since the last misfortune of the Texas Pacific Railroad Bill, and comes after us like an aggravated tarantula, in this fashion:

The Los Angeles Herald is in a witty vein, the future of San Diego in one word—"uncertain." Let us see: In 1870 this county had about 2,000 population; assessed valuation, about $1,000,000; bee ranches, none; farms, none to speak of; mines, none opened; the town, just beginning to be built. In 1875, population over 10,000; assessed valuation over three millions; honey export last year, nearly 500,000 pounds; wool export over 1,000,000 pounds; wheat production, 250,000 cents, etc.; a town with permanent improvements that will compare well with anything Los Angeles has to show and public buildings that Los Angeles cannot begin to equal; and a people who have no such word as "uncertain" in their vocabulary.

But perhaps the Herald is witty at the expense of our railroad prospects. We may well retort that, if there is a place in Southern California whose railroad prospects are "uncertain," it is Los Angeles—uncertain, that is, as to the realization of the anticipations of her people. The distressing question even now is, "main line, or branch?" Los Angeles is unfortunately situated in this respect. At the very best, even on the "main line," can be but a way station. On the other hand, San Diego is built upon the shores of the second harbor in California, to which the railroads must come; and while her people may have to endure some trial of patience in waiting for their advent, and her productive wealth is increasing with really marvelous rapidity. Here, if anywhere in California, the future may be counted upon with certainty.

The same old tune—"harbor"—harpied to one thousand and first variation! Of course San Diego harbor is good—or will be as soon as they get the sand deposited by the river scooped out of it. And San Diego will always be a good shipping point for local freights, perhaps a first-class town some day. Her people, though they may not be "uncertain," as the word goes, are still on the fence dividing their faith equally between Providence and Tom Scott, with a little hesitation as to which one of the deities they shall address their prayers to. The question of "main or branch line" for Los Angeles has long since been settled and fixed in a contract beyond the disposal of any railroad company, as shown by the striking out of the objectionable clauses in the Southern Pacific Bill.

Los Angeles will have not one, but two, main lines, and already has three branches. Our city will be the focal point for shipment at three ports—"Willington, Santa Monica and Bolsa Chico"—three of which will answer for practical purposes as well as San Diego harbor. But we do not wish to inaugurate a newspaper warfare with our San Diego neighbors and, besides, it is mean to kick a man when he is down. But let us bet on the fact that we consider the prospects of San Diego certain—for a very good town.

The New Postoffice.

Between four o'clock last evening and midnight, Postmaster Bent and his efficient deputies removed the Postoffice from the old location in Temple Block to the new office, next door to the Herald office, and this morning everything will be ready for the prompt delivery of mail matter as usual. The office is a great improvement on the old one. There is a great deal more room, a large number of lock-boxes have been added, and a number of other improvements made. The clerks will be glad to have the clerks and facilitate the delivery of the mails. Los Angeles now has a first-class Postoffice, a first-class Postmaster and a corps of active and efficient clerks.

A three-year-old youngster saw a drunken fellow "tackling" through the street. "Mother," said he, "did God make that man?" She replied in the affirmative. The little fellow reflected for a moment, and then exclaimed, "I wouldn't have done it!"

Boy on Uncle's knee: "Uncle, what's that in your throat?" Uncle—"That's an Adam's apple." Boy—"Adam's apple! Has it got a stem?"

Unwelcome Information.

EDITOR HERALD: It is an old and well known adage that gratuitous information is not well received. Persons who have sacrificed everything to the hurricane sweep of their own unbridled passions, come, when too late, to conclude that any price would be paid for immunity from disease and consequent dissolution. But the only bank on which they might draw with hope of their drafts being honored has been depleted; their vitality has been squandered, and Nature, the chief cashier, does not know the needy applicant. We pay fabulous sums to employ valiant knights, who, mounted on their fancy steeds, make feints of charging down upon error, while they are secretly scattering the seeds of disorder. Why? Simply that under the abnormal conditions, disorders are the best paying crops to cultivate.

The temper must be drawn from the human steel in order to make it subservient. All the buck bone, all the moral stamina, it is an absolute necessity for the tyrannically inclined to annihilate. How better can this be done than to encourage and foster the use of narcotics and stimulants that unfailingly deplete the vital sum?

"Oh, I would rather enjoy myself while I do live than to be eternally depriving myself of these indulgences," say the victims of tobacco, tea, coffee, alcohol, drugs, etc. And, of course, they will never be taught a better policy, so long as the weighty influences of damnable rings and monopolies are on the side of their constant use. How else could the whole world be kept in subjection, if it were not by the potent assistance of these enervating habits that come to be second nature and are transmitted from one generation to another? Once admit the entering wedge of these heresies against the universal indulgences, and "Othello's occupation's gone." My doughty knight, that now annals himself and the unthinking crowd by charging hither and thither at errors of his own creation, would have to dismount and harness his steed to cart or plough to earn his own bread, if the "dear people" were once educated in the fundamental laws of health of body and mind. Therefore, by all means, let us suppress these meddlesome emancipationists who are constantly annoying us with their gratuitous information.

San Bernardino Items.

[From the Argus.]

Whooping cough is quite prevalent among the children in town.

Sixty-seven additional Chinamen just from San Francisco were put to work on the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad Wednesday.

Senator Jones writes from Washington that he will return to California about the middle of March and will at once look into his Panamint interests.

Chief Engineer Crawford has sent to San Francisco for a steam Bury drill, for use upon the rock in Cajon Pass, and it will be forwarded immediately and set to work.

The matter of constructing a good wagon road from some point on the railroad up the Santa Ana to Bear Valley is being mooted and like every other measure finds some enthusiastic friends.

Mr. Thom returned from the front yesterday, and reports that the camp of the grading party is not more than six miles from San Bernardino. There is no iron at Spadra but three vessels sailed from New York some months ago, and when they arrive track laying will commence.

Anaheim Items.

[From the Gazette.]

The Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company are about to lay off two sections of land into town lots. The site is near Costa Station, about five miles from Anaheim. It is probable that the new metropolis will be named Northam.

Mr. Hansen, the gentlemanly conductor on the Anaheim Branch, is the passenger of Wells, Fargo & Co., and can be relied on to transact business in Los Angeles with accuracy and attention at a very small charge. He has access to the banks in the afternoon, and will transact any banking business.

A company is being formed for the purpose of erecting a fine hotel, of sufficient capacity to meet the wants of the public in this prosperous section for some time to come. It was at first the intention to build it on the west side of Los Angeles street, opposite the Presbyterian Church, but being unable to procure the necessary land for the purpose, the company talk of building on Center street a short distance from the railroad depot, if they can procure a suitable site. We will be able to obtain the full particulars of this enterprise in a few days.

It will be remembered that a few days ago a shock like that of an earthquake was felt. It wasn't an earthquake, however, but merely the concussion of the atmosphere produced by the rapid descent from a high altitude of the four-year-old son of Al. Steinhardt. He was playing on the porch of Phil Davis' house, when he toppled over and fell a distance of eighteen feet to the ground, the only damage being the loss of some skin from his little nose. It was some time before his parents could ascertain from him the cause of his damaged proboscis, as he dreaded that his escape would get him a licking. He didn't get it.

THE LITTLE PEOPLE.

When a boy is sitting on the sunny side of a barn, waiting for his father to come and "lick" him, you might as talk astronomy to him for four straight hours, and not excite his interest.

A Dubuque boy was rather troubled for fear he would not know his father when they both reached heaven, but his mother eased him by remarking: "All you will have to do is to look for an angel with a red nose on him."

Sunday School teacher—"What do you understand by suffering for righteousness sake?" Boy, promptly—"Practicing hymns in the morning, teacher, and Sunday School in the afternoon, and Bible class in the evening!"

They are again telling of Anna Dickinson's probable debut on the stage. This time it is to be in the Spring at Boston, and in the role of "John Dark," as the lecture committee called it in naming Miss D.'s subject, "John, d'Arcy."

California Wheat.

Ten years ago California produced only wheat enough for her own consumption, if, indeed, enough was raised in the State for that purpose. The immense proportions which that crop has reached in a single decade, is one of the most astonishing events of the century. The Chronicle well remarks, that "if this immense mass of wheat had come down upon us in a shower from heaven, it could not have been more unlooked for than it was a few years ago. The surprises in California, in an agricultural way, have been greater than those of the mineral, astonishing and bewildering as they have been."

The amount of the surplus is stated in figures at 20,000,000 bushels, or about 600,000 tons. To form a definite idea of what these figures mean is a very difficult matter. The New York Herald, in order to assist the understanding, says that, loaded in carts, each containing a ton, to be hauled to New York, the first would be at its destination when the last was leaving San Francisco. This, at first thought, seems extravagant; but in order to travel comfortably, not much more than two hundred carts could be ranged upon a mile, and hence the statement is not very wide of the mark.

Political Economy.

There is a good deal of wisdom to be found in the by-ways. A recent English book mentions some lines, known as the "Seven Conditions," which appear beneath a series of old designs to be found in almost every house on both banks of the Rhine: The first is the emperor, who says, "I levy tribute."

Next comes the nobleman, who says, "I have free estate."

The priest says, "I take tithes."

The merchant says, "I live by my profits."

The soldier says, "I pay for nothing."

The beggar says, "I have nothing."

The peasant says, "God help me! for these six other men have all to be supported by me."

IT IS SELDOM that we notice anything in the medical line, nor would we now, unless we could be convinced that we are not doing our duty as journalists in recommending to the public the celebrated botanical preparation of Dr. Henry's Extract of Sarsaparilla, for the cure of Scrophulous diseases of the blood, to use Dr. Henry's Extract of Sarsaparilla, has been a good work. There can be no question as to the result of this medicine if persevered in. It is a sure cure for Scrophulous diseases, and for all kinds of complaints arising from vitiated and impure blood. It is just what a good physician would prescribe for these complaints, and we confidently recommend it as being the best article now in use. Dr. Henry's Cough Balsam is the most effective remedy for any affection of the Throat or Lungs that we have ever known. It contains no deleterious drugs, and can be taken with impunity and certainty of relief. For the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, etc., it stands without a rival. Dr. Henry's Liniment is an alleviator

MOUTON.

On a cold and rainy morning in March, 18—, a young man might have been seen sauntering leisurely up the Boulevard Sebastopol. He was about twenty-four years of age, with a frank, ingenious face, and his costume, though elegant, was almost coquettishly simple. Arriving at the upper end of the Rue des Lombards, he stopped suddenly and respectfully bowed to his friend Mouton, who was coming slowly down the street and crossed the boulevard. On the threshold and discolored pall which was thrown across the door, he saw a flower or the slightest token of remembrance. Alone, with moist eyes, he looked at it, and in his hand, followed sadly a spool, looking the picture of desolation. At sight of this moving spectacle the young man shuddered and murmured sadly:
"Shall it be said that there is not a Christian man capable of following the example of this dog?"

"Unfading world! I will follow the poor, abandoned one; it shall not be said he was buried without a prayer," and stepping into the muddy street he took a place by the faithful and last friend of the dead.

The dog turned his head and looked inquiringly at the new comer, then falling back a little, he walked with him, looking up at him from time to time with his soft brown eyes. They arrived thus at the place of burial.

The grave-diggers in hardened and indifferent manner took the coffin on their shoulders, muttering at the same time maledictions upon the rain and the bad road leading to the grave. At the side of this frightful gaping hole, surrounded by the thrown-up earth, the dog stopped, posed himself across it, stretched his paws, and raising his head, uttered a long, dismal howl.

The young man, already much moved by the desolate surroundings of the place, shuddered, and, carried away by the grief of the poor creature, said to himself: "This is horrible. Is there no means of depositing these remains in a more decent place than this?" and with a trembling hand he pointed at the hole where the just and unjust are thrown well-mixed to the great grief of the poor friends of the departed who have no means of buying a spot of that earth which God made for all.

"Bah!" growled one of the men, there or elsewhere, it is all the same to us!" "Citizen," said the other, sentencing a windfall, "if you can pay it can be arranged, though this person is hardly worth the trouble."

"It is well," said the young man;
"wait for me while I speak to the superintendent."

They placed the coffin upon the ground, seated themselves upon it with the most philosophical indifference. The dog following with his eyes upon his new friend, until he was hidden from his view by the tomb of the cemetery, when, as if fancifully, that his master's friend was quite abandoned, he recommenced howling; then went and laid his head upon the coffin regardless of the men who vainly endeavored to drive him off. An hour later, the sad ceremony of interment was finished, and the poor dead reposed in six feet of earth, decorated with a black cross.

After having commended to God the soul of the departed, the young man arose and called the dog, "Come," he said, passing his hand softly over his wet head, "the day has been well spent! Come, my poor friend, thy fidelity has been recompensed; come, I adopt thee, and sometimes we will come together to visit thy old master, I promise thee!" And as if he com-prehended these words, the dog raised his head, looked him intently in the face, gave a joyful bound, and having hooked his hand trotted on before him.
Master and dog returned by the Avenue Sebastopol.

And here a word of the hero of this little story. The young man, whom we shall designate as Leon Varons, is a painter, whose talents are too well known to render a eulogy of them at all necessary. He had several years been the period of which we are writing adopted an artistic career, to the very pinnacle of which his other hand arrived long before his death.

Educated under the supervision of a pious and good mother, he had so profited by her counsels and example as to have retained the purity of his heart and action in the midst of the dissolute art life of Paris. Gay, frank, and enthusiastic in all that he did, he was good, and good wherever he encountered, he had formed him to be—good, truthful and brave. Living alone, he labored assiduously in his studio, his young friends, who knew him to be rich sneered at his industry, ignoring the fact that it had preserved him from the temptations to which an artist, young, rich, and handsome, is always subjected. His atelier was decorated with sweet and precious souvenirs of a beloved mater, and with many of his father's chef d'œuvres—objects of respectful pride, examples of glory to be acquired.

To return to our two friends of the Boulevard Sebastopol. Arrived at the corner of the street Artois, before a high house of sombre appearance the dog stopped and refused to proceed.

"Well, will you come?" said Leon, whistling back a little after having waited and called in vain. "Come, we are not yet at home." "Because he heard not, though always looking at him, the dog went and came—entering the dark corridor of the house, coming out again, and looking in a provoking way at his new master.

"This is singular," said Leon.
"What is the matter with you? But it was here, or near here, that I met him; perhaps this is the house of his old master. We will see." And he followed the dog, who sprang briskly up a dark and crooked stairway.

But animal very soon discovered that, notwithstanding his willingness, it was not possible for him to ascend as rapidly as himself; so, stopping at the landing-place, he wagged his tail and gave little joyous yelps as if to encourage him, then recommenced his guidance to the upper story, where he waited in a dark hallway between two opposite doors; one of these he pushed open with his muzzle and presented to the artist a piteous spectacle.

On a pallet covered with rags an old woman, wasted and wan, and seemingly in the last convulsions of agony, and near her a boy of ten years, sol-ing, on his knees, in a far corner of the chamber, upon the floor, was a bed of straw, which still preserved the print of a human form. Upon a poor broken table, covered with a white handkerchief, stood before an image of the Virgin a brass Christ, surrounded by masses of artificial flowers and two candlesticks, in one of which was still smoking the wick of a wax candle. No other furniture; nothing but some ragged garments hanging here and there on the walls of the desolate chamber. With a bound the dog threw himself upon the boy and almost devoured him with caresses, while the little fellow put his arms about his neck and sobbed as if his heart would break.

"Ah, Mouton, it is over them! And now God is taking from us my grandmother, we shall be all alone. She says we must die, too!"

"No, no! indeed you shall not die!" interrupted Leon, much moved. "We are here, your friend Mouton and I, to prevent it."

The child started at the stranger's voice and looked inquiringly at Leon, whom he had not noticed until now.
The sick woman slowly raised her head and looked at the stranger, then at her grandson, and endeavoring to speak, but her voice was so feeble she could scarcely articulate.

Leon approached her and leaning over said, softly: "I come to bring you hope."

The woman's eye lighted up for a moment, then, with an almost superhuman effort, she said: "Speak! but—who sent you to us?"

Leon pointed to the Christ upon the table: "He who cares for all His creatures. For His sake Providence watches over your child!"

Then he told her of his adventure with Mouton, and of his fidelity.
She called a little and said, "Ah, sir, I thank you!" and she tried, with a hand fast growing cold in death, to press that of her benefactor, who asked,
"What can I do for you?"

"Me, nothing; for him, much. He will be alone and friendless," and her filmy eyes rested sadly on the weeping boy. She stretched forth her trembling arms, into which the child threw himself, sobbing wildly. "My child, my joy! I am going! God bless you!"

Leon placed the little fellow upon his knees by the bed, then laying his hand tenderly upon his head, he said to the dying: "I promise, madame, always to protect your child."

A ray of divine light passed over her face; she could not speak, but placed her hands on the heads piously bent over her, which were soon raised with the blessings of heaven and of the departed soul upon them.

There was in the exhibition of 1870 a work of art representing an atelier in which a boy of twelve or thirteen years, handsomely and tastefully attired, smiles upon his teacher, under whose supervision he is spiritedly sketching a model very solemnly posed upon a velvet cushion. The boy is the adopted son of our hero, Leon Varons, and his best scholar. The model is our friend Mouton—Mouton, plump, glossy and curly; unrecognizable physically, but morally unchanged. —Translated from the French.

Patrick Malony went to his priest and asked him, "What is a miracle, your reverence?" The priest asked him several questions, and found he had been to the revival meetings and heard strange talk. He was mighty mad, and, telling Paddy to stand out before him, he gave the poor fellow a tremendous kick in the rear. "Did it hurt you?" asked the priest. "To be sure it did," says Paddy. "And it would be a miracle if it didn't," replied his reverence; with which Paddy walked away—answered, but not satisfied.

A gentleman went to a Lamasco ball the other night. A fellow with wide trousers with red leather on the bottom of them, and new shoes, came up and said: "I've just got a pocket filled with black eyes, which I believe I will begin handing around." The man consented to go up toward the front of the up-town society. When he arrived the boys began to chaff him.
"Why didn't you stay?" Just then a man came along. Both eyes were swelled up as big as boxing-gloves and both of his arms were in a sling.

"Boys," said the man who didn't stay,
"that fellow there stayed." The crowd accepted the explanation. —Evanville,
